

A NOTE TO REMEMBER

Let's dive in.

All verbs in the English language (except for to be), have five forms: base form (infinitive), past tense, past participle, present participle, and third-person singular (or -s form).

- Base form: (to) talk
- Past tense: talked
- Past participle: talked
- Present participle: talking
- Third-person singular: talks

When figuring out if a verb is regular or irregular, the forms you have to consider are past tense and past participle.

Past tense refers: to something that happened in the past. For example, the past tense of jump is jumped.

The kids jumped in the bounce house.

Past participle refers: to an action that was started and completed in the past. Auxiliary verbs (e.g., to have) precede past participles.

The kids have jumped in the bounce house.

Past tense and past participle are similar, but past tense leaves open the possibility that the action will continue to occur in the future. The kids jumped in the bounce house (and might continue to jump again later on). However, the kids have jumped in the bounce house implies the jumping started and ended (there's no more jumping happening later on).

Reference:

Published on 2023 by Language Tool Retrieved from:
<https://languagetool.org/insights/post/grammar-regular-vs-irregular-verbs/>