UNIT IV: PLANS

INTRODUCTION TO THE UNIT 4

In a distance learning context, mastering communication about social events and future arrangements plays a key role in developing fluency and cultural awareness. Unit IV, “Plans”, focuses on providing learners with the necessary skills to talk about their plans for specific dates, accept or decline invitations appropriately, and discuss and negotiate future arrangements. By practicing these communicative functions, students strengthen their ability to interact in real-life situations where cultural traditions, celebrations, and social interactions are central. This unit not only fosters language competence but also promotes intercultural understanding and confidence in expressing personal choices and social commitments.

UNIT OBJECTIVE

By the end of this unit, students will be able to communicate effectively about their plans for particular occasions, respond appropriately to invitations by accepting or declining them, and engage in conversations to discuss and agree on social or personal plans. These skills will enable learners to interact more naturally in both academic and everyday social contexts, enhancing their linguistic proficiency and cultural adaptability.
