DID YOU KNOW?

More information is created in one single day on the internet now than in many centuries of human history before the digital age.

Every time you use an invention like your smartphone, read a news story, or share something online, you are part of this huge flow of information.

In this unit, you will learn how to talk about inventions, imagine how life would be without them, and understand how news stories work, so you can decide what information is really important for you.
